

Environmentally sensitive

A clever design with a conscience

A spacious and well-thought-out design by Malibu Pools and Landscapes managing architect Sean Lynch has transformed a plain backyard into a stunning family oasis.

A stylish design complements the angles of the home's architecture, while the pool and landscape have also been created with the environment in mind.

"This pool is the result of meticulous planning and smart design. The brief was to create an eye-catching deck area that allowed active use all year," Sean says.

"Water-wise plants and mulch were incorporated into this ingenious energy design, while the pool and gardens are all connected to tanks for pool top ups and drip-feed irrigation."

The pool and landscape were designed as part of an overall water-saving system on the property. Any water runoff from the home is used to top up the swimming pool and fill up storage water tanks.

Water catchment systems, including evaporation blankets and freshwater chlorination systems were also used to ensure this Brisbane site does its share for smart site sustainability, Sean says.

"We offer clients energy and water-wise designs that integrate contemporary elements. These designs are a complete project for maximum continuity of flow within the site. Malibu specialises in environmentally sustainable designs that include all elements of the brief into the one project."

This pool and landscape package is another eye-catching creation by Malibu Pools and Landscapes.

Designed by Sean Lynch to complement the architecture of the home, this contemporary swimming pool's design includes a soft, cascading water feature and a shallow reflection pool.

Engineered for strength and longevity, the pool has been constructed following extensive retaining wall work to enable this pool to be set at deck level.

For added effect, a wet edge has been used to bring waterflow towards the eyeline, with water flowing over the edge into the shallow reflection pond located between the pool and the home.

The pool and landscape have been constructed with the environment in mind. Water tanks have been integrated for all irrigation of landscaping and turf areas, with evaporation blankets and freshwater chlorination systems installed for sustainability.
